

ACTRIS Science Conference 2026

20-23 April

Oslo, Norway

The International Conference on Atmospheric Research

ACTRIS Science Conference 2026 is the second physical edition of the event. This international conference brings together researchers investigating atmospheric composition and interactions, air quality, and climate feedbacks, along with their impacts on human health and sustainable development. Several hundred people are expected to attend this major atmospheric science event.

The conference will be structured around keynote and oral sessions and more interactive moments such as scientific poster presentations, the exhibition and an opening ceremony.

Activities in the region of Oslo will also be offered to participants.

Long-term trends and variability of the atmospheric composition

Atmospheric processes in the natural or controlled atmospheres

Air quality and health

Innovative technologies and methodologies for atmospheric probing

Extreme events and emerging scientific topics in atmospheric sciences

Oslo, Norway - The venue

The city of Oslo will host the second physical edition of the ACTRIS Science Conference

The venue is located at the Scandic Fornebu Hotel, about 30 minutes by public transport from the city center.

With amazing views of the Oslo fjord, Scandic Fornebu Hotel is one of the largest conference hotels in eastern Norway.

Blending indoors with out spacious terrace, the hotel combines modern comfort with the beauty of its coastal surroundings. Here, nature is part of the venue; beaches, hiking trails, and marine life are right outside the door.

What's more? Oslo is connected by direct flights from major European cities. Scandic Fornebu Hotel is located 50 minutes by public transport from Oslo Gardermoen Airport (OSL).
